feels my judgment is wrong. He appeals, and the court could have been wrong, that I shouldn't have gotten a judgment against him. Does that mean that I can go and get the money from his paycheck while his appeal is waiting? No. What happens in the arena is that he'll appeal, he'll file some...a bond in court. The judgment I get against him is, obviously, stayed. Now that's on an individual basis. The issue that Senator Bromm has, and I think all of us have had at some point in time, because it's not just unique to the Public Service Commission but they are different, is should that be the case in a competitive environment? And I think that's what we all struggle with. We want a meaningful chance for a stay, all of us do. I think you want to have some system that's fair to everybody. How do we do that? Do you involve a district court? Do you have some other measure of proceeding? It's probably, in this case, not likely that the commission will ever stay their own. I mean they made the ruling. It'd be unlikely they'd come back and stay their own ruling. So that's probably...I think that you want to give them that flexibility, but I don't think that's probably in and of itself a meaningful opportunity for a stay. The issue is, will the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals do this on a routine basis? And if they do, they you have to look at the three factors here. Are those fair factors? And I think Senator Bromm's probably answered that in that the committee felt that those were fair factors to put out there, but the real bottom line issue that I think we're going to struggle with, and I'm not here to say that you shouldn't pass the bill today. That's not my point. My point is I just want to make sure that there is a meaningful process of a stay and that there is some opportunity to do it, and that the standard that we use is a meaningful standard. My guess is that between now, and if the bill does move, between now and Select File, there is going to have to be some fairly serious discussion about what is the proper procedure...

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: One minute.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: ...to give you a reasonable opportunity. But there are other agencies, if you've followed the Administrative Procedures Act and the Administrative Procedures Code, your appeal is to district court. The district court is an evidentiary court which is used to, day in and day out,
